

As the Season Changes, So Do Your Rates

Non-summer rates effective Oct. 1 – Bills Will be Lower

Autumn in Virginia brings a bounty of joy such as cooler temperatures, beautiful foliage and a drop in humidity.

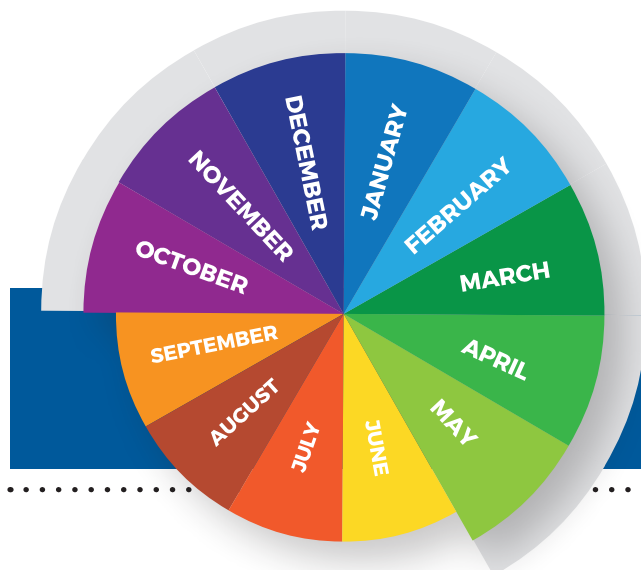

For members of REC, the season also brings lower rates.

Beginning Oct. 1, members will notice a decrease in their electric rates, as REC returns to non-summer rates. REC introduced summer rates in June, with members paying slightly more for electricity June through September and less October through May.

Summer electricity use drives the cost REC pays for electricity all year. The State Corporation Commission (SCC) approved the implementation of summer rates early in 2018. REC's SCC-approved rate adjustment went into effect in March.

With seasonal rates, REC members will pay less for electricity eight months out of the year.
